

HOLDING STOCKS

With stock funds...the longer the better for potential growth

The performance potential of stocks is best measured in years, if not decades. As these charts show, holding stocks over longer time periods has historically produced greater opportunities for achieving positive returns.

If you were investing in stocks for these periods of time between 1927 and 2008, here's how often you would have experienced a gain or loss. For 81 one-year periods the stock market produced a gain 73% of the time. For the 77 five-year periods the stocks produced a gain 89% of the time. For the 72 10-year periods the stocks produced a gain 97% of the time. And, the stock market produced a gain for every 20-year period.

PAST PERFORMANCE IS NO GUARANTEE OF FUTURE RESULTS.

This calculation is based on the 1927-2008 history of the Standard & Poor's 500 Index (S&P 500). The S&P 500 is an unmanaged, capitalization-weighted index of stocks designed to measure performance of the broad domestic economy through changes in the aggregate market value of 500 stocks representing all major industries. Actual investments may not be made in an index.

This chart is for illustrative purposes only and is not intended to demonstrate the performance of any particular investment in a mutual fund.

In return for their greater growth potential, stocks are more volatile than other types of investments.
